Other flowering isles must be . . . 335.

Flowers, n. A. Lit. blooms or blossoms.
like flowers that mock the cone beneath,
Fresh leaves and f. deck the dead Seasons' bier;
Exhales itself in flowers of gentle breath;
Cease ye faint flowers and fountains,
A light of laughing f. along the grass is spread.
Flowers, ruins, statues, music, words,
no mourning maiden decked With weeping flowers, banks, whose yellow flowers For ever gaze when stretched Upon thy flowers . . . Adonais, XLIX. 4.
so from his steps Bright flowers departed, . . . Laon, VI. xxviii. 1.
Nurses of rainbow flowers and creeping moss, men Go to their graves like f. or branching worms,
made the earth gleam With bright flowers,
I feed the clouds, the rainbows and the flowers
the pale flowers are dying, . . . Wich, XXIX. 4.
The flowers are withered up with grief wilderness of trees And flowers . . . Adonais, XLIX. 4.
Let birds, and flowers, and leaves,
And that the flowers of this departed spring
Sad funeral flowers to deck a living corpse, the flowers Which bloom so rarely . . . Adonais, XLIX. 4.
Although no flowers smile on the trodden dust,
Who would love May flowers . . . Adonais, XLIX. 4.
Gloriously as a grave covered with virgin flowers.
fresh showers for the thirsting flowers,
Soon pried flowers, sweet-breathing, closely carpeted With flowers and grass.
But fruits are ever ripe, flowers ever fair,
O, ye hours, Follow with May's fairest f.
I told my lot With various flowers,
the odours deep Of flowers,
The breath of her false mouth was like faint flowers,
With flowers as soft as thoughts of budding love;
Awaken all its fruits and flowers,
Parasite flowers illumine with dewy gems
Of waves, flowers, clouds, weeds
Which, like flowers, will burst from them.
while like flowers, In the waste of years . . . Adonais, XLIX. 4.
Of all flowers that breathe and shine:
I wish The f. upon our path were frost and snow.
illumined dust of golden flowers;
And so they grew together like two flowers
the flowers Which she had from the breathing—
a shade Of gentle beauty on the flowers;
Is laid asleep in flowers.
The flowers upon my bridal chamber strewn from the expanded f., Scatter their hoarded incense.
With graceful flowers tastefully placed;
There sleep in their dark dew the folded flowers;
till buds and f. W. are the obscure inevitable hours,
We strew these opiate flowers
thou numbered. The flowers, and men, and beasts, and flowers,
But votive tears and symbol flowers.
On the soft flowers the meadow-grass among,
As a green bank with flowers—
Strewn flowers upon the barren way,
And sent him buds and books and urns for f.
Poison, a snake in flowers,
The shells on the sea-sand, and the wild flowers,
The token flowers of truth and freedom fair, wake Under the wave, in flowers and herbs mossy nook, with mountain flowers dispread.
But fruit, and flowers, and boughs,
A paradise of flowers,
Flowers on the mountains,
for whose grave thou bearest Fresh flowers,
Like bees on mountain flowers;
With strange and star-bright flowers,
Among rocks clad with flowers,
And the scent of winged flowers, fell like dew On flowers half dead;
As winter to fair flowers (though some be poison)
The sweetest flowers are ever frail and rare, . . . Adonais, XLIX. 4.
As flowers beneath May's footstep waken, singing here And gathering flowers,
Faded like gaudy flowers that blow—
Where humble wild flowers grow?
While flowers are gay,
And, like unfolded flowers beneath the sea,
All over f. with azure moss and sweet starlike flowers and herbs of odour sweet, Flowers, which in winter serve instead.
flowers burst forth like starry beams;
th. f. and fruits, and happy sounds,
To gather for her festal crown of flowers
But now invested with fair flowers and herbs, summer winds Salute with sweet flowers.

Into the utmost leaves and delicate flowers; . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
Thou dost nourish these young flowers; . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
the flowers, the trees, Arise in due succession;
But fruits are ever ripe, flowers ever fair,
Gathering a garland of the strangest flowers,
And flowers azure, black, and streaked with gold, Methought that of these visionary flowers . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
Pansies let my flowers be:
When flowers were dead, and grass was green
But like flowers delicate and fair, spread From flowers half drunk with evening dew,
By woods, and fields of yellow flowers,
Like flowers, which on each other close . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
From mountain flowers, . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
The seasons' loveliest flowers were strewn
I heard strange tongues, and saw strange flowers, and garlands bound With amaranth flowers,
The flowers (as an infant's) awakening eyes
Of the flowers whose hues they bear afar;
I like fire in the flowers till the sun rides high,
Which to the flowers did they waken or dream,
I doubt not the flowers of that garden sweet
And out of the cups of the heavy flowers
If the flowers had been her own infants . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
In a basket, of grasses and wild flowers fall,
The sweet slips of the flowers, and harm not . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
Three days the flowers of the garden fair, and the flowers among the grass, . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
and all sweet flowers.
Among the flowers and grass,
Rain-awakened flowers,
the fair level grass and nodding flowers
Thus the earliest, the loveliest of f. I'd entwine,
And its roof was flowers and leaves
All flowers in field or forest, path where flowers never grew . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
The stems of the sweet flowers, upon the new Embroidery of flowers, me, sweetest flowers delayed not long;
paved with flowers and moss,
light among the leaves and flowers,
Visiting my flowers from pot to pot,
Of the sweet flowers and sunny grass,
and over pallid flowers Hang like moist clouds:
and o'er the grass and flowers . . . Prom. II. 1. 183.
In f. and leaves, and in the grass fresh-strawn,
Upon its leaves and flowers;
Strong leaves and tendrils, and its flowers fair, shook the leaves and flowers On which he wept,

Bow thy white head before offended God, — I. iii. 157.

O, God Almighty, do thou look upon us, — II. i. 4.

Thou, great God, Whose image upon earth a father is Almighty God, how merciful thou art !
 Till God m pity call for hum or me
 Oh, that the earth would gaze ! Hide me, oh God !
 Whom in one night merciful God cut off :
 Seeing we had no other judge but God,
 So help me God,
 A priest who has fors. on the God he serves ;
 My God ! The beautiful blue heaven
 My God ! I never knew what the mad felt Before ;
 O, God ! What thing am I ?
 Which God has created, on the path
 I pray thee, God, Let me not be bewildered
 If the lightning of God has e'er descended Oh, God ! If, for thy very reasons
 I have prayed To God,
 Great God ! Weigh you the danger
God can understand and pardon,
 Such was God's scourge for disobedient sons.
 Mark, how wisest God
 farewell ! Let piety to God, arrayed in God's immortal likeness Might plead that argument with God ?
 If God, to punish his enormous crimes,
 more depends on God than me.
 Vile palterer with the sacred truth of God,
 A rebel to her father and her God,
 Her apostle's approach the throne of God with father's curse doth God
God ! Hear me !
 As thou the common God and Father art in the name of God,
 When high God grants he punishes such prayers.
 Quick Nature ! I adjure thee by thy God, as a man believing in God,
 Which God extinguish !
 My God ! If he be now a cold stiff corpse
God ! hear, O, hear, A father's curse !
 Stop, for God's sake !
 Thou wert a weapon in the hand of God
 my God ! it sounds Like the last tramp Before the throne of unappealable God who shall answer in the rage of justest God.
 I then know scriptures to avenge
 Ay, I ever knew, for God is wise and just,
God is there As here,
 like God's anger mustered upon By fiends ;
 My God ! I did not kill him ;
 As merciful God spares even the damned.
 As that most perfect image of God's love
 So mayst thou answer God with less dismay
 Over the trampled laws of God and man,
 Hear me, great God ! I swear, most innocent, O, God ! How shall I tell ?
 after death, God is our judge,
 Or wilt thou rather tax high judging God
 Father ! God ! Canst thou forgive
 The God who knew my wrong,
 O, God ! God ! God !
 May God in heaven be less inexorable
 Oh, my God ! Can it be possible
 If there should be No God, no Heaven,
 Trust in God's sweet love,
 No difference has been made by God or man,
 You do well telling me to trust in God,
 and unforbidden By God or man ;
 If God be good, wherefore should this be evil ?
 A man who thus twice crucifies his God
 by special ordinance of God forbidden
God is my witness that this weight of power, the office of a God To all the under world ;
 to his God Alone he must deliver up his trust, Which play the part of God who great Redeemer, when our God, God will give Victor
 A public orator of the word of God,
 our God Pattern of all I should avoid to do ;
 Were I ten enemy of my God and King
 Wreat man's free worship, from the G who loves,
 In love and worship blends itself with God.
 But ye, pure Children of God,
 Civil enough in this name God Almighty,
 the quick Wit of that man God, St. Dominic,
 And in despite of God and of the devil,
 The spirit of God with might unfurled less accessible Than thou or God !
 A power from the unknown God,
 O, faith in God ! O, power on earth !
 One God in God - Malachi is his prophet.
 We King of Kings, one Hope, God, and man, and hope alone men ;
 bestriding The tempest of the Omnipotence of G,
 Serve not the unknown God in vain,
 Thou dost not own that art, deiver, or God,
 Thou art as God, whom thou contempest.
 Concerning God, freewill and destiny Nature, or God, or Love, or Pleasure, that God thus builds for man in solitude ?
 What then is God ? (rep.)
 And that men say, God has appointed Death .

Laon, v. Song, 2.
 — VIII. iv. 9.
 — VIII. v. 1.
 — VIII. vi. 8.

Men say that I have seen God.
And it is said, that God will punish wrong;
For it is said God rules both high and low,
some said I was the child of God,
to their God did they For Earthquake,
By God, and Nature, and Necessity, in the heart of man is God itself;
Almighty God his hell on earth has spread!
to the high fane Of their Almighty God,
O God! they cried, we know our secret pride
O God Almighty! thou alone hast power!
Our God alone is God!
To wreak his fear of God, in vengeance on mankind.
For the sacrifice Of God to God's own wrath—
For fear of God in his bosom breed and all shall utterly perish. Whose God is God,
And thronous, which rest on faith in God,
That God will lull the pestilence?
Our God may then lull Pestilence to sleep—
the withering ire Of God may be appeased.
With storms and shadows gray, sat- God, alone,
Come they yet? God, God, thine hour is near!
they said their God was waiting brought their atheist kindred to appease G. wrath, tread the threshold of God's throne,
Ye turn to God for aid
Swear by your dreadful God—
All thought it was God's Angel
God has sent but his other victim here—stand up before God's golden throne,
Oh God! my wife, my children
To thee, then, mighty God, I lift my moan,
God hears my prayer—we meet, we meet again.
Who has rushed uncalled to the throne of his G.,
I am God, and King, and Law
Thou art God, and Law, and King, Whispering—Thou art Law and God—
Thou art King, and God, and Lord; Dream that God will damn for ever that ye Are, as God has made ye, free—Pleadest before God's love!
Freighted with truth even from the throne of God:
God prosper, speed, and save,
God save from England's grave
God save the Queen!
Even thy name is as a god,
Beware! for God's sake, beware!—
For God's sake stop the grunting
By the God who made their such,
The grace of God in every word
The one God made to rhyme with hell;
though no adept In God's right reason
And raved of God, and sin, and death,
'Tis a lie to say, 'God damns'!
God's sweet love in burning coals.
Damm'd—but God alone knows why.
A dew ran down from God above.
Adultery! God defend me!
From God's own voice in a review.
From God's disgrace,
the sons of God Were in the roofless senate-house,
The shadow of God,
Haste, sons of God, . . . for ye behold, assemble, sons of God, [arrayed] In temple of the omnipotence of God.
Wake, thou Word Of God, Divides and multiplies the most high God.
implored The poor man's God
the God Of nature and benevolence hath given As God surpasses man.
God, Hell, and Heaven.
Converging, thou didst bend and called it God!
The merciful, and the avenging God!
one God would not suffice For senile puerility;
Use the God of human error,
for that man's God. There is no God.
The name of God Had less about all crime.
Seeya, Buddh, Foh, Jehovah, God, or Lord,
And priests dare babble of a God of peace,
Is there a God?
Is there a God?—aye, an almighty God,
From an eternity of silence! I, God, awake;
(Which you, to men, call justice) of their God.
God omnipotent, Is there no mercy?
O God! repent and save.
As vessels to the honor of their God,
I have seen God's worshippers unheathen and misery, Which flows from God's own faith.
One creature alone was spared—the name of God.
And priests first trined with the name of God.
Nor sparing reason with the brand of God.
But the name of God was most holy grace,
Oh God! Wherefore do I live?
And he pray'd to God to dissolve the spell,
The Monk call'd on God his soul to save,
Was as God is to the starry scheme.
May lift itself in homage of the God.
Why there is first the God in heaven above,
A God that broods o'er chaos in commotion; would to God they were Who taunt me
And would to God I were,
that God in mercy gave That stroke.

Nor you cold vacant Heaven :—
 And from the frieze to the four winds of Heaven
 The moon had left Heaven desert now, morning beam Crept slowly over Heaven, beneath Heaven spread In purest light above us the warning Of Earth to Heaven Her Ionks were sweet as Heaven's game Of the great Image as o'er Heaven it glode, O Spirit vast and deep as Night and Heaven!
 For the carmen fowls of Heaven
 For ever while the sun was climbing Heaven
 While the sun climb'd Heaven's eastern steep—haunted By the choicest winds of Heaven,
 In the eastern beams of Heaven shone the emerald beams of heaven,
 In the blue heaven so beautiful and fair, where breath of Heaven Descended not,
 the broad Heaven shone Around,
 Like the brief glory which dark Heaven inherits the steady towers in Heaven did shine like light and Heaven, Surround the world.
 Earth and Heaven, The Ocean and the Sun,
 And Heaven above seemed cloven, tossed restlessly In the red Heaven, beneath the dome Of a new Heaven;
 With loud acclaim, the living shook H. cope,
 All light in Heaven or Earth,
 as twinkling beams, had, under Heaven,
 the progeny Of a diviner Heaven,
 The azure path of Heaven's steep,
 The winds of Heaven mix for ever
 See the mountains kiss high Heaven
 And o'er the vast cope of bending heaven hung its night On the stained cope of h. light.
 More joyous than the heaven's majestic cope
 the dim ocean Heaved underneath the heaven, Striding across the orange-coloured heaven,
 Gazing in death on heaven from those wet rocks.
 Blue as the overhanging heaven, and to the infinite dome Of heaven is as a law, Art thou pale for weariness Of climbing heaven, every star Spoke peace from heaven.
 heaven strip bare Its depths over Elysium, pantest Naked, beneath the lidless eye of heaven!
 The serene Heaven which wraps our Eden wide Who spreadst Heaven around it, Bid thy bright Heaven above, were hurled Into the depths of heaven.
 the open smiles Of favouring heaven :
 Our sun illumines heaven ;
 to pave Heaven's everlasting dome.
 When like heaven's sun girt by the exhalation darkening the sacred bowers Of serene heaven.
 ye lamps of heaven suspended o'er us.
 From a white lake blot Heaven's blue portraiture, Even thy name is as a God, Heaven!
 What is heaven? and what are ye
 What is heaven? a globe of dew Shook from the tangled boughs of H. and Ocean, the comrade of thy wanderings over heaven,
 Pierce the pure heaven of your native vale,
 There rose to Heaven a sound of angry song, and the high dome Of serene Heaven, with bold triumph till Heaven be rent, conceals the . . . of heaven Which gave it birth,
 I ask you Heaven,
 Heaven's ever-changing Shadow, spread below, Heaven's winged hound, thro' the wide Heaven!
 By such dread words from Earth to Heaven
 the hollow Heaven replied, 'Miserable!
 My spired light wane in wide Heaven;
 Shook its portentous hair beneath H. frown;
 the Heaven Darkens above.
 The heaven around, the earth below
 Three eyes are like the deep, blue, boundless H.
 And on each herb, from which H. dew had fallen,
 Is curtained out from Heaven's wide blue;
 The radiance of Heaven,
 Like the wide Heaven, the all-sustaining air,
 The terrors of his eye illumined heaven
 Which meet from all the points of heaven,
 That guides the earth thro' heaven.
 Looking in wonder up to Heaven,
 As the free Heaven which rains fresh light and dew
 The loftiest star of unascended Heaven, Trembling, by day, from Heaven's blue waste.
 Bright clouds float in heaven,
 Perce with song Heaven's silent light, over all his kind as the man's heaven struggling fierce towards heaven's free wide sea.
 heaven's utmost deep Gives up her stars,
 Heaven, hast thou secrets?
 From my path in Heaven at last,
 Of thine own joy, and heaven's smile divine;
 divines Among all the lamps of Heaven Beyond Heaven's constellated wilderness:
 from Heaven's star-fretted domes cometh stars Studded A. dark blue vault,
 The smallest light that twinkles in the heaven;
 As Heaven, low resting on the wave, it spread Looked o'er the immense of Heaven.

Reared high to heaven is thou—A golden dome,
 Whose changeful paths thro' H. deep alcove lie; Heaven's own vault, Studded with stars whence you glare That fires the arch of heaven?
 the pure winds Of heaven,
 than the beams Of heaven's pure orb, specks of incense, fixed in heaven
 the very light of heaven Is vernal; Revivify this withered limb of Heaven?
 the smoke Of his revenge ascended up to heaven,
 H. lightning scorches the uprooted ocean-fords,
 Let heaven and earth, let man's revolving race, ascend to heaven In honour of his name;
 which heaven's fierce flame Had scathed
 No storms deform the beaming brow of heaven,
 Unfurl their pinions to the winds of heaven.
 To the hues of you fair heaven.
 Among Heaven's winds my spirit once did move.
 With golden stars, like heaven, was bright.
 How swiftly through heaven's wide expanse
 When Heaven's blithe winds had unfolded them, Shone smiling to Heaven,
 And when evening descended from heaven above,
 That from heaven, or near it,
 Like a star of heaven,
 rains out her beams, and heaven is overflowed.
 Clothing in hues of h. thy dim and distant spirit.
 If I look on Spring's soft heaven,
 and Heaven above my head,
 the least Of heaven's living eyes—
 A light of heaven, whose half-extinguished beam waked like heaven's glance The sleepers as the loveliness of h. Soothes the uneasy sea—Methought a star came down from heaven, from the heaven Above the clouds;
 sleep was a veil uplift from heaven—
 As if heaven dawned upon the world of like a deluge from heaven,
 And bend, as if heaven was raining in, thunder-balls which are raining from heaven
 a woman more fair Than heaven, Between ocean and heaven, like an ocean, past,
 based on the sea and to heaven upreared,
 The deep calm of blue heaven dilating above, paved with heaven's azure smile,
 their wide branches blot the spheres Of heaven, could dye In hues outshining Heaven
 a noon-wandering meteor flung to Heaven;
 that heaven Was as a gem to copy Heaven engraven.
 the abyss Of heaven with all its planets;
 Pilgrim of heaven's homeless way, World's Wanderers, II. 2.
 From heaven and earth, and all that in them are,
 By Heaven and Earth, from all whose shapes thou flowest,
 The winter beams which out of Heaven slanted Tears pure as Heaven's rain,
 (8) God, Divine power.
 I Appeal to Heaven against thee;
 In thy just favour, Heaven!
 Which shows that Heaven has special care of me.
 And drag them from the very throne of Heaven,
 With which Heaven mocks our weakness!
 Heaven, rain upon her head Believe that Heaven is merciful and just,
 a deed where mercy insults heaven
 Both Earth and Heaven, consenting arbiters,
 When A. doth interpose to do What ye neglect,
 No other hope in Heaven
 the small justice shown by Heaven and Earth Sweet Heaven, forgive weak thoughts!
 thank the mercy of insulted Heaven
 Which turns Heaven's milk of mercy suns which have drawn down from Heaven Heaven's thunder to our harm;
 Did all the ministers of Heaven's revenge
 Which from Heaven like dew doth fall, a light sent From A., which none shall quench, Against the course of Heaven and doom,
 If Heaven should resume thee,
 To Heaven shall her spirit ascend;
 Drew with its gleam swift victory from heaven,
 Heaven smiles, and faiths and empires gleam,
 All earth can take or Heaven can give.
 many a rite which Earth and Heaven abhors.
 Heaven will not smile upon the work of hell;
 Ah! no, for Heaven cannot smile on me;
 Oh! heaven is witness I did love,
 And heaven does know I love thee still,
 Forgive me Heaven, my brain is warp'd by woe.
 the murmurs tell That heaven,
 O'er him the fierce bolts of avenging Heaven
 Rained down from heaven above—
 Heaven will save The spirit, that faded away
 And these, Heaven knows, at best are very few;
 take as from heaven Hues which are not our own, (O Heaven, have mercy on such wretchedness!)
 the spark with which Heaven lit my spirit
 (8) the abode of God and the blessed, may the Devil Respite their souls from Heaven.
 Had it been true, there is a God in Heaven,
 Of his decree . . . Heaven?

So is Hope Changed for Despair—the sense Of hope thro' her fine texture
 And happy regions of eternal hope.
 Or turn regret to hope;
 For love and hate, despondency and hope?
 Or hope can paint or suffering may achieve, truth Had overlived hope's momentary youth,
 I would fain reply In hope—
 Look not so, Laon—say farewell in hope,
 A warmer zeal, a nobler hope now find;
 aye, thou didst rear That lamp of hope on high,
 those seeds of hope might yet be sown.
 When from all mortal hope she did depart,
 And hope, I know not whence or wherefore,
 For hope whose fountain can be thus profound,
 O Spring, of hope, and love, earnest of the hope Which made them great,
 All hope, or love, or truth, or liberty,
 Of youthful hope returning suddenly,
 Whose wound of power is hope,
 Dearer than life and hope,
 and in hope Closed their faint eyes;
 Since hope and peace, and joy, for aye are fled,
 That fire, more warm and bright than life or h.,
 Green strength, azure hope, and eternity:
 To swallow all delight, all life, all hope.
 We meditate In secret joy and hope
 Who bears the untransmitted torch of hope
 The sparks of love and hope
 Incapable of judgment, hope, or love?
 And full of wonder, full of hope as he.
 And many days of beaming hope
 With him lay dead both hope and pride.
 Alas! all hope is buried now.
 And hope, and courage mute in death,
hope and peace On all who heard him did abide,
 Whose hope was like the life of youth Within him,
 And winged hope, on which upborne
 How sad, when dear h. every sorrow is soothing.
 I have not hope nor health,
 and in those eyes where once hope shone,
 And happy thoughts of hope, too sweet to last.
 (4) expectation, confidence.
 No other hope in Heaven
 Ah! wherefore dust thou build thine hope?
 Renew and strengthen all thy failing hope,
 still from hope to hope the bliss pursuing,
 And full of wonder, full of hope as he.
 With all the fear and all the hope they bring.
 And many days of beaming hope shall bless draw The unweary light of hope;
 A short-lived hope, unceasing care,
 What hope of refuge, or retreat, or aid?
 But the unborn hour, Cradled in fear and hope,
 Like hope and terror—
 Such hope, as is the sick despair of good,
 Unlinked with hope that thou wouldst free
 Thus power and hope were strengthened
 In hope on their own powers began to look,
 And power shall then abound, and hope arise once more.
 a trance which awes The thoughts of men with h.—
 the fearful overthrow Of public hope—
 From glorious phantasies of hope departed:
 A pause of hope and awe the City bound, dimmed hope's newly kindled flame.
 And fame, in human hope which sculptured was,
 Since hope pursues immortal destiny
 And half in hope, and half in fright,
 One hope is too like despair
 'Twas the hope, the prophecy,
 still from hope to hope the bliss pursuing how could false hope rend a bosom so fair?
 Health, hope, and youth, and brief prosperity;
 (5) confident trust that a thing may be possible.
 is the lady impossible to hope that I could lift my hope So high,
 And in that hope have saved your life three times.
 So, daughter, our last hope has failed;
 To feed his hope with cold encouragement:
 nor is there hope But from the Briton:
 Through the sunset of hope,
 When the last hope of trampled France had failed
 And baffled hope like ice still clung to me,
 From one faint hope whose flower a dropping poison shed.
 Why was this hope not torture?
 but to subdue Such dreadful hope,
 with which that child like h. with fear was blended.
 And desperation's hope in many hearts recurred, made free, —a hope which we have nursed this hope must ever rise
 Why became checks . . . Paler from hope?
 The hope which I had cherished went away;
 From eyes of quenchless hope the hope of what will be?
 with brief And blighting hope,
 With fear and self-contempt and barren hope.
 The hope of torturing him smelle like a heap till fear grew hope and faith,

 A hope which is now forever past,
 (6) the prospect of amelioration.
 When hope has kindled hope,
 No hope! No refuge! O, weak, wicked tongue
 In thanks or hope for their dark lot.
 thy strong genius, Laon, which foresaw This hope,
 And never dreamed of hope or refuge until now, but still there clung O hope!
 Each of that multitude alone, . . . one h. yet knew;
 No change, no pause, no hope! Yet I endure.
 Most vain all hope but love; and thou art far,
 I said all hope was vain but love: thou lovest.
 my heart was sick with hope, Abandoned hope, and love that turns to hate;
 'All hope abandon ye who enter here;
 Hardened to hope, insensible to fear,
 Is there no hope in store?
 And see no hope for them?
 gleam of hope Safflower the Spirit's lineaments.
 Renew and strengthen all thy failing hope.
 For public hope grew pale and dim
 Love, hope, though hope was now despair—
 When no blissful hope on his bosom is beaming,
 (7) an object that is desired.
 Staking his very life on some dark hope,
 Each with the ghost of some lost hope or friend
 The very hope of death's dear rest;
 On any hope within the curling skies,
 (8) one in whom we place trust or confidence.
 Our love, our hope, our sorrow, is not dead;
 the eyes and hope of Antioch,
 Who clings to me, as to her only hope— one who hopes That his day's path may end as he began it,

 Hopes*, n. (1) expectations, aspirations. glimmering Incarnations Of hopes and fears, cold h. swarm like worms within our living clay, Thy hopes are gone before:
hopes that never yet Had flushed his cheek.
 And lofty hopes of divine liberty,
 From the unravell'd hopes of Giacomo Blasting the hopes of men, have there entranced Those rooted hopes,
 Are there not hopes within thee,
Hopes that not vainly thou, then Our hopes and then our fears—
 And now thy hopes are gone, the hopes that from his glory fled,
 and hopes that cannot die.
 Will our hopes, our fears, and our labours, meet Withered hopes on hopes are spread, thou scene of earliest hopes and joys,
 Be those hopes and fears on thee.
 And multiply upon our shattered hopes hopes that ate themselves on dust and die—Hopes of high talk with the departed dead, round pure hearts, a host of hopes assemble,
 Those hopes had lost the glory of their youth,
 False dispirants on all its hopes and fears,
 These h. found words thro' which my Spirit sought Watching the hopes which their her heart heard to trace Laughs o'er the grave in which his living hopes are laid.
 Our memory, and whose hopes its light retain
 In victory or in death our h. and fears must blend,
 And all its h. and fears, and all its joy and ruth?
 young Laon's name Rallyed their secret hopes,

Each hour may stumble o'er a sudden grave.
O, that the hour when present sharp and narrow hour Tottering beneath us.
Keep the fierce spirit of the hour at bay, the angel that distributes the coming hour approaching in ill hour
"In but the voyage of a darksome hour,
When in his hour of pomp and power
That fret their little hour in gloom,
Fled in the April hour
The Planet of that hour, was quenched,
The hour is come :
Hence, coy hour ! and quench thy light,
Hence, swift h. ! and thy loved flight Off renew.
Do not disturb your hour of happiness to keep An hour of quiet and rest :
At this late hour ;—and then all in still—
Good night? ah! no; the hour is ill.
Thence at the hour and place and circumstance
the omnipotent hour to which are yoked
For thy sake cursed be the hour, but the un*hour* Cradled in fear and hope,
Ask the cold pale Hour,
As they were to whom once this present hour,
The brightest hour of unborn Spring,
To take what this sweet hour yields;—
It seemed as if the hour were one
"The last hour of day.
the hour which burst My spirit's sleep:
And from that hour did I with earnest thought
Now has descended a serene hour.
And ever from that hour upon me lay one, as since that hour I knew,
at the hour When he was snatched from death,
Come they yet? God, God, thine hour is near!
the same hour in which thy lips divine to long ages shall this hour be known;
Even when in most unwary hour
Loe's Rose, III 3.
Seal thee from thine hour of woe;
and o'er each waking hour,
let the hour Come,
Enduring thus, the retributive hour
With new endurance, till the hour arrives
When shall the destined hour arrive?
Who waits but till the destined hour arrive, Thou most dearest Hour, more loved and lovely and it came Hour leisure from the last giddy hour Of dead endurance, Learnt in soft childhood's unsuspecting hour,
to know That hour as blest
'Tis but the voyage of a darksome hour,
That led us forth at this lone hour
That from that hour, throughout one day,
Brought in that hour my lovely boy;
And they sing of the hour
But that hour is past;
And that hour was the last Of peace to the dark moon's brain.
The hour, when man must cease to be?
Soothing her love-laden Soul in secret hour
Not false, that shadow of the unborn hour
Lighting the hour of sacred love;
and whose hour Was drained to its last sand
The child of a fierce hour;
had known before that hour of rest;
This hour will be thy memory
Hourly, adj. constant, continual.
I feed it with the breath of fear For hourly pain.
Their hourly occupations were possess
Hours, n. A. Lit. pl. of Hour. A. Lit. (1).
The few surviving hours of the day
Eight years are gone, And they seem hours,
In the waste of years and hours,
What! from a cannonade of three short hours?
We met night three hours to the west of Patmos,
Two hours, whose mighty circle did embrace Beyond three days, whose hours were told Whilst the lagging hours of the day went by
And how we ought, two hours before,
And others say, that, when but three hours old,
B. Fig. (1) indefinite spaces or periods of time.
In lone and silent hours,
Day after day, a weary waste of hours,
Will I not nurse this life of feverous hours:
The hours crawl on;
The hours when we should act?
when years heap Their withered hours,
Whose sunny hours from morning until noon
Of this unfathomable flood of hours,
And unappetetic of the coming hours,
and how in hours of youth etc.
I call the phantoms of a thousand hours
we must live some Hours or ages yet to come.
Charged with light memories of remembered h.,
Which had adorned his life in happier hours,
in life's young hours These sights and sounds so when and hours were come the winged hours which speechless memory Waste the triumphal hours in festival and song!
as thought and feeling Number delightful hours—

And the coolness of the hours Of dew,
Oh! lagging hours how slow you fly!
Whilst yet the calm hours creep
The eager hours and unreluctant years
Rest with those dead, but unforgetten hours,
A heavy wright of hours has chained
Will thou forget the happy hours
Three thousand years of sleep-unbattered hours,
The wingless, crawling hours,
my waking hours Too full of care and pain.
Mother of many acts and hours,
Whose hours extinguished
Day after day of happy hours.
as the hours content them by Agitates the flint flame of their hours, in the hours of sleep, To glide adown old Nilus Waked by the darkest of December's Hours
(2) as mythological personifications.
The sleepless Hours who watch me as I lie,
Orphan Hours, the year is dead,
Merry hours, smile instead, Solemn hours! Wail aloud be calm and mild, Trembling hours,
And April weeps— but, O, ye hours,
Ye faint-eyed children of the . . . Hours,
What! do not the silent hours Beckon thee
Warn the obscure inevitable hours,
These are the immortal Hours,
Spectres we Of the dead Hours be,
Spread on the corpse of the King of Hours!
The past Hours weak and grey,
Once the hungry Hours were hounds
Let the H., and the spirits of might and pleasure, Sit watching your dance ye happy Hours!
Fairer children of the Hours,
Keep these imaged children of the Hours
Pale for the falsehood of the flattering Hours until man shall know That they alone can give the bliss

Yes: I know: I was bewildered.

I do not know

I know not how, but we were free:

Alas, we know not what we do

I A. not how thy joy we ever should come near.

there may be Some more, for what I know, you know what they are worth—

The Lady Leonora cannot know seemed to know Whither he went,

Whence I am, I partly seem to know,

Men scarcely know how beautiful fire is—

The Meliad doth not know its value yet

(3) feel certain, am assured.

I know not what I feel!

I know not where to find him now,

I'd do,—I know not what I know you are my friend, and all I dare something must be done; What, yet I know not

When I know what, I shall be still and calm,

Which is, I know, a hell of angry dreams,

I know not what to say . . . my father's dead.

I know not what to think know, that what I just supposed

I know, Happy yourself, you feel another's woe.

I know That one makes all things equal:

I know you will sing sweetly when you're dead.

We know That we have power over ourselves

I know That to myself I do not wholly owe but of the first I know not yet,

I know not whether months or years;

We know not what will come—and we did know, That virtue,

I know that she is innocent;

I know not; something sweet, since it is sweet

I feel, I know it: who!

And know, though time may change

I know thou wilt, and cannot forgive

And know, that if love die not in the dead

in which I wake to weep, I know not.

My brain is dizzy, and I scarce know

I loved, I know not what

(4) learn, be informed.

Know that since we met

Know that I only fly You look,

Yet know, proud Vice, had I not given

And know, that had I disdained to toil,

It remains to know, I then rejoined

Know then, that from the depth of ages old,

K. then, that when this grief had been subdued,

know thou alone,

his last sight Was the great moon, Alastor, 645.

even when his feeble hand Shakes in its l. decay.
 Rapid clouds have drawn the l. pale beam of even :
 Tempt not with one last tear
 That I may kiss thee now for the last time—and its last and sole resort
 The tapers . . . Are their last cost
 So, daughter, our last hope has failed ;
 It sounds Like the last trump has wrung a higher truth From my last breath
 Like the last thoughts of some day sweetly spent the last day of the holidays
 Which, when ye wake from the last sleep
 Draw the last spirit of the age of gold,
 I find the people ripe for the last day,
 Before my last step in the living dance tangled in the grasp Of its last upturn
 But now if you would not your last sleep dose ;
 'Tis the last hour of day
 On whose last steps I climb
 When the last hope of trampled France had failed
 As if by the last wreck its frame were overtaken the last echo of those terrible cries
 the last Burns on that awful silence ;
 like the last beam Of dying flames, the last eventful day Will level all
 Than the fell tyrant's last expiring yell ?
 The last thing as he went to bed Seeking in vain his last embrace, the languid close Of the last strain,
 Like the last glare of day's red agony,
 And death shall be the last embrace of her
 And emblems of its last captivity, the tortuous strength of their last pangs on the sun's last ray Hangs o'er the sea, from the last ghidly hour Of dead endurance, sweetest, last and noblest title—death ;
 Scarce satiable by fate's last death-draught
 The last, when it had sunk ;
 o'er my dying brain its last monotony took The coffin, its last cradle, from its niche,
 (2) latest, youngest, the most recent.
 Thy extreme hope, the loveliest and the last,
 Be broken in its last and deepest wound ;
 The last of the flock of the starry fold ?
 veil her horn In thy last smiles ;
 The last news from the camp is,
 Now the last day of many days
 The loveliest and the last, is dead, the last living heart whose beatings bound thee :
 Undarkened by their country's last eclipse.
Last of the Intercessors !
 By that last look of yours we think
 The last look Love remembers since they had brought The last inter-
 (3) all that remains of number or quantity.
 companionless As the l. cloud of an expiring storm Consuming the last clouds of cold mortality
 I'll feast on you the last of your companions Hide the last altar's unregarded dust, till the pallid beams Of the last watchfire fell,
 The last of those who mocked thy holy name, Maintain you in to the last drop of—Daylight on its last purple cloud drained to its last sand in woe or woe, Desire, like a lioness bereft Of her last cub,
 (4) after all others, ending a series.
 He came the last, neglected and apart ;
 Quite a new piece, the last of seven
 The best, loveliest and last Of his name !
 Whom Neptune and Apollo wooed the last,
Last came Anarchy : be rode and thou couldst not be, Last of the Romans,
 And the last is Peter Bell,
 Which last is a scheme of paper money,
 the last whom superstition's blight
 And that hour was the last Of peace to the dark monk's brain
 (5) next before the present or that which is to come.
 Even as he did after the last last night
 That Beatrice disturbed the last last night ?
 deprived last year Of a reward of blood
 After such torments as are bore last night, the music Mari received last week from Italy,
 How I ran home through l. year's thunder-storm
 Was roused last night by the alarm of battle,
 Stolen they were last night at set of sun,
 The words you spoke last night
 As came on you last night—
 One mood or modulation like the last.
 For hidden thoughts, each lovelier than the last,
 And each seems uglier than the last.

 since last we met
 When did you see him last ?
 he may tell to die : it ends in that at last.
 Since l. last came up to the wizard mountain ;
 they last On Death's bare ribs had cast
 But wilt thou hear, since last we parted
 (4) with at, finally.
 and my poor horse at last, Quite overcome,
 'Twere wise to die : it ends in that at last.
 will tear the truth Even from thee at last.
 At last he will sit down in some foul puddle ;
 Have awakened him at last.
 Which clove his own at last ?
 O might it die or rest at last !
 Where it will break at last.
 Till from that glorious intercourse, at last,
 at last, he bent O'er me his aged face,
 We came at last To a small chamber,
 At last, when daylight 'gan to fill the air,
 At last the tyrant cried, She hungers, slave,
 And I became at last even as a shade,
 At last her plank an eddy crost, till at last I have dumb'd her,
 and at last desert me too
 At last, I told them what is death :
 Sinks the wretch in death at last.
 and at last must awaken it
 A father watches, till at last.
 Fell into the same track at last.
Last, v. intr. endure, continue.
 and make the present last
 They last while Jove must reign :
 No cessation ! Oh ! must this last for ever !
 A love so sweet it could not last.
 Which made us wish it yet might last—
 If tenderness and truth could last Or live
 And happy thoughts of hope, too sweet to last.

Like that which gave it life, to spring and die.
All objects of our life, even life itself,
That fades not when the lamp of earthly life,
eternal spring Of life and death,
And life, in multitudinous shapes,
Not more endowed with actual life
Poisoned the springs of happiness and life;
Thou art love and life! O come,
For love and life in him were twins,
in every other First I, then love its course begins,
I loved, and I believed that life was love.
A life in life, a second birth
For the spirit of life o'er every limb Lingered, Falls when life deserts her brain,
Wholst animal life many long years
I loved—Alas! our life is love;
Is the flame of life so fickle and wan
And life, where long that flower of Heaven whether life had been before that sleep
The action and the shape without the grace Of I.
Then, what is life? I cried—
Alas! what life, what is death, which move, And form all others, I, and love. When passion's, III. 5.

He hath awakened from the dream of life—
Staking his very life on some dark hope, Bearing within his life the brooding care it hung Upon his life.
Thou imagest my life
the highway of the life Which we all tread,
Than his most worthless life:—
The meanest or the noblest life.
I cannot thus relume My father's life:
Must quench the life that animated it.
For an old murderer's life that animated it.
the poor life Which is a mask without it
A life of burning crimes
Would that my life could purchase thine!
Who was the loadstar of your life:
What is his poor life?
made thy life's path Over the trampled law
When my life is laid asleep?
The atmosphere and breath of my dead life!
How weak, how short, is life to pay
This will I do with peril of my life,
Thy spotless life of sweet and sacred love.
That piteous thought which did my life console!
The life that wears, . . . One object,
Be thus our home in life,
For their two hearts in life were single-hearted.
The health of life's own life.
Than the unborn dream of our life
Arel guides you o'er the sea Of life
Gives grace and truth to life's unquiet dream.
When musing deeply on the lot Of life,
to my onward life supply Its calm urged by the whip and goad To drag life on,
Most fortunate beneath life's beaming morn;
Whose life was like a setting planet mild,
in life's young hours These sights and sounds
Well might men loathe their life, now she was all I had To love in human life,
To burst the chains which life for ever flings
That gentlest sleep seemed from my life to sever, Until life's sunny day is quite gone down, like the kiss of love when life is young,
the painted veil which those who live Call Life:
Sad was his life who bore there in his breast,
Snatch'd from I, course ere half his race was run!
When endless bliss the woes of fleeting life repay.
No life can equal such a death
Forget thy life and love;
To curse the life which is the cage.
Utterly poisoned life's unmingled bowl,
Has thrown himself, her cause, her life, her all,
Though his life, day after day,
Pressed out the life of life,
Who mark the extremes of I discordant span.
Ass, thou light of life,
and all That tempers or improves man's life,
Death is the veil which those who live call life:
Into the grave, across the night of life,
The painted veil, by those who were, called life,
Each day-dream of her mortal life,
and poisoning The choicest days of life,
that wastes A sunless I, in the unwholesome mine, Whose life has been a penance for its crimes.
A life too void of solace to confirm
All objects of our life, even life itself,
His life a feverish dream of stagnant woe,
Life is its state of action,
Thy spotless life of sweet and sacred love.
That, from earliest life,
And sleep, when the night of life is cloven,

but in this life Of error,
He came like a dream in the dawn of life,
To be after life what we have been before?
And yet I wear out life in watching thee;
(3) as a personification or entity.
Spread thy couch in the chamber of Life!
at her silver voice came Death and Life, and took From I green tree his Uranian lute;
But a voice answered—Life!
For in the battle Life and they did wage,
(4) human affairs, daily life.
The monsters of life's waste had fled Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass, far above All else in human life?
the glory far above All else in life is—Love!
Linked with each lasting circumstance of life,
And all the fit restraints of daily life,
As tempers Life's worst bitterness;
will find Life a worse Hell
as should make The peace of life,
To blacken in the sweet light of life.
There, light of life . . . dead, dark!
new strength to lead the thorns of life.
the arch of life, Whose safety is its strength.
Who complies with laws the life of man,
Would make life sweeter for a longer time.
The greatest among men for joy of life.
Life is its state of action,
Which lurk beneath the tide Of I unquiet stream
Of acting a forced part in life's dull scene,—
She met me, Stranger, upon life's rough way, Under whose motions life's dull billows move,
this world of life is as a garden ravaged,
Into the dreary cone of our life's shade;
Into the wintry forest of our life;
In the sea of life and agony;
Darkening Life's lullaby routine way for life's great cheat.
And took upon his day of life
But life's familiar veil was now withdrawn, to look us from the sun Of this familiar life,
If Liberty Lent not life its soul of light,
Alas! this is not what I thought life was.
Which had adorned his life in happier hours,
the various story Of human life,
I heard as all have heard, life's various story,
For to tread life's dismaying wilderness the wave of life's dark stream.
while the stream Of life, our bark and life is poisoned in its wells.
ye are the rings of life's perpetual coil,
which life's strong wings encounter.
Who might have made this I envenomed dream
these myriads from life's crowded stage:
From the haunts of daily life
Of what make I foul, cankerous, and abhorred; Crowded him the King of Life.
if Life can breed New wants,
To judge with solemn truth / ill-appointed lot?
I fall upon the thorns of life!
For those who crown life's cup with poison any whom life's sphere May comprehend Pass triumphing over the thorns of life,
The desert of our life.
in life's green grove Sport like tame beasts, Forcing life's widest shores to own
To all that shares the lot of human life, filled All human life with hydra-headed woes.
How calm and sweet the victories of life,
Through life's phantasmal scene in fearlessness,
Walking beneath the night of life,
Dull life's extremest goal.
and call life pleasure;
Which rides o'er life's ever tumultuous Ocean;
wear These heavy chains of life with a light spirit,
And through our restless life,
It floats with rainbow pinions o'er the stream Of life,
To death on life's dark river.
In the light of life's dim morning.
The Nature masks in life several copies
The tasks of run in the world of life.
Which stirs the liquid surface of man's life,

Light, sound, and motion own the potent sway,
As light and wind within some delicate cloud might be seen Day's ruddy light;
 the glare Of the moon's dying light;
 Ere the dawning of morn's undoubted light,
 When light rode high, and the dew was gone,
 and at the birth Of light,
 a veil of light is drawn O'er evening hills
 And the moon will smile with gentle light waves, and clouds, And lastly light, Panting forth light among the leaves
 Brighter than morning light,
 Gazed like a star into the morning light,
 Changed half the light to fragrance.
 Banded armies of light and of air,
 and three Long lines of light,
 And intertangled lines of light— began To turn the light and dew by inward power with brightest gems Of living light—

 In the light of its golden wings.
 Makes it wain with her borrowed light.
 Floating on waves of music and of light
 rears light Check their unearthly speed;
 Hung like a mist of light,
 Whose rays of rapid light, Bedimmed all other light— amid yon flood of purple light,
 it spread its floors of flashing light,
 With borrowed light pursued their narrower way.
- Speeded like thought upon the light of Heaven.
 Send the stars light, but send not love to me, Whose waters like blithe light and music are,
 made By Love, of light and motion
 With ever-changing sound and light and foam,
 And before that chasm of light,
 Mingling light and fragrance,
 Half the crimson light she brings
 And gives so bad a light,
 A melancholy light, like the red dawn,
 Here the light burns soft as the enkindled air,
 now it winds, one torrent of broad light,
 Just there shines a peculiar kind of light—
 Lay like a chaos of unwelcome light,
 With light like a harsh voice,
 like the wake of light that stains The Tuscan deep,
 like the fibres of a cloud instinct With light,
 One star with insolent and victorious light—
 A light and a destruction.
 the heroic light Made all the shadows of our sails blood-red,
 clouds unveiled or hid Her boundless light, Space, and the isles of life or light
 And pants in its beauty and speed with light—
 The sound of their oceans, the light of their sky,
 Far light is scattered—boundless glory springs,
 Then is made full the circle of her light,
 A light of Paradise,
 The most purple spot of light,
 The deep bliss Of that unutterable light
 what light is in the sky, blue light did pierce The roof of those white clouds,
 So, from that chasm of light a winged Form
 A shaft of light upon its wings deac'nded,
 It stood like light on a careering stream
 Ten thousand columns in that quivering light filled that dome of woven light,
 And those who sat tending the beacon's light,
 Like light amid the shadows of the sea
 Beneath whose spires, which awayed in the red light,
 And its red light made morning pallid now,
 A wondrous light, the sound floated on the river Of liquid light,
 A shadow, which was light,
 did wear Light, as from starry beams;
 the light divine Of her within;
 which floated 'mid a strange and brilliant light;
 Enthron'd in roscate light;
 And still the mist whose light did hang Sudden, from out that city sprung A light,
 And dreary light did widely shed which bound its airy arch with light like blood;
 A mist, a light, an image rose,
 Was as the light of sunny rain.
 And those plumes its light rained thro'
 A rushing light of clouds and splendour,
 Out of the cave this hideous light had clef,
 a light more dread than obscurity.
 And the clouds are light,
 Atoms of intensest light.

- glittering in the light Of the wood fire,
 Dark and throng of light.
 The innumerable worlds of golden light
 Wraps there as a star Is wrapt in light.
 By the red light of their own burning homes.
 It scatters drops of golden light,
 With azure waves which burst in silver light, an light Lures winged insects
 Oh Spirit! pause, and tell whence is the light and the light Which fills this vapour, illumined heaven With sanguine light,
 but by the light Of wave-reflected flowers,
 Hang downward, raining forth a doubtful light:
 Lining it with a soft yet glowing light:
 With a serene light and crimson air
 Which star the winds with points of coloured light, how on its head there burns A light,
 Of music, and dance, and shapes of light,
 the brightness of white light
 Flow, as through empty space, music and light:
 A bath of azure light, among dark rocks,
 And stop obedient to the reins of light:
 Sheds not a light so mild, so powerful,
 it spread its floors of flashing light,
 these minute orbs of mingling light,
 Than the stars' soft light.
 When the light from the wood-fire's dying brand
 Like the light of an unmeasured star,
 Laden with light and odour,
 Which scattered love, as stars do light which endure No light, bring themselves obscure.
 Torturing all its quest light
 Like light dissolved in star-showers, thrown:
 Spanglet of light on evening's shadowy veil, Ere thy fair light had fled—obscured with blinding light— æthereal gloom Tempers the light.
 Lake moths by light attracted Seeking to reach the light— and crowns, or wreaths of light,
 Of light dyer than the common sun
 A Shape all light, which with one hand did fling waned in the coming light, whose light is like the scent Of a jonquil
 So knew I in that light's severe excess the crew Seemed in that light, its light left them dim
 the clime Of that cold light,
 The sphere whose light is melody to lovers—
 Like a meteor of light o'er the waters!
 The light in the dust lies dead—
 A lovely lady garmented in light—
 Out of whose depth a fire-fly shakes his light— as a previous one Dissolved in ever-moving light, sailed thro' under the light Of shooting stars, and shook The light out of the funeral lamps,
 As if it were a lamp of earthly light,

 As from a centre, dart thy spirit's light.
 Heaven's light forever shines.
 That Light whose smile kindles the Universe,
 In darkness of his own excreting light.
 Obedient to the light That shone within his soul, Whose light adorned the world around it,
 and gaze upon the light of truth,
 clothed In light of some sublimest mind,
 And light of thoughts that pass away.
 A living light, to cheer it long,
 'tis like thy light, Imagination!
 Fills Avon and the world with light.
 Now new fires from antique light
 beholdest now Light around thee, given him a glimpse of Heaven's light
 In the brief dust and light.
 Let there be light and Liberty,
 Thy light alone—like mist o'er mountains
 By gazing on its own exceeding light.
 But in the light of all-becoming truth,

 the floods of light Which flow over the world,
 The light of life, the loveliness of being,
 thou in light descending O'er the wide land Shall clothe in light the fields and cities
 Her madness was a beam of light.

- Look* how the gusty sea of mist is breaking
Some look behind, as fiends pursued them there,
I dare not look on thee;
Will look on thy more warm and equal light
Listen; look!
Look on yonder earth:
need but look upon That dying statue,
Oh, I would look in thy dear beam thou shalt look on it with me.
If I look on Spring's soft heaven—
Look from thy dark earth, slumber-bound,
Not to look on those eyes,
Yet look on me—take not thine eyes away,
(2) used of inanimate objects or personifications.
Night, with all thy stars look down,— that the light of day should look Upon that idol which from the towers Of Heaven look forth Night, with all thine eyes look down!
Or the dewa fall, or the angry sun look down
Fiercely look forth his awe-inspiring eyes,
Which, from their unworn obelisks, look forth
(3) consider, think of.
made me look Upon the monster of my thought,
And with thy memory look on thy friend's mind,
But look on that which cannot change—
Sweet friend! can look from our tranquillity
In hope on their own powers began to look—
Look on your mind—it is the book of fate—shall start, Look back, and shudder Whose stings bore thy heart look further still,
We look before and after,
We look on the past

How hideously look deeds of lust and blood Ah me! How pale you look;
and look averse and cold,
Your eyes look pale, hollow and overworn, look as dark as a rock before the other—
All shapes look glorious which thou gazeest on!
When trees look green
And ye, weak conquerors! Giants who look pale
In deeds which make the Christian cause pale
And where the aged forest's limbs look hoar,
(2) of an assumed air or mien.
Look not so dreadfully!
Look not so calm and happy,
Love, look thus again,
Look not so, Laon—say farewell in hope,

And every one looked in his neighbour's face
- I looked, and saw that home was hell.
She looked around in wonder and beheld Henry,
from the eye That looked on them—
I looked, and saw between us and the sun
I looked on him,
and looked forth and smiled
And then I clasped my hands and look around
And after every groan looked up over the sea.
I looked, and we were sailing pleasantly,
Looked into mine, like moonlight, soothingly;
I looked, and lo! one stood forth eloquently,
Of the calm smile with which she looked on me:
I looked abroad, and saw a star
now looked on high,
And looked upon the depth of that reposing lake.
He looked on me, and cried in wonder—
My own sweet sister looked,
At length she looked on me,
They looked around, and lo! they became free!
Looked from their meal,
And the Lady ever looked to spy
And looked abroad if she might know she looked behind And saw
She looked on that gate of marble clear,
And as she looked, still lovelier grew Those marble forms;
She looked, the flames were dim,
And looked,—and all was empty air.
And the prostrate multitude looked—
I looked on them nine several days,
So in his Country's dying face He looked—
And as the lady looked with faithful grief
Alas! I looked forth twice, but will no more.
I looked, and all the blossoms were blown down;
but soon I looked, And behold,
She looked around in wonder and beheld Henry,
All looked on me,
My mother looked at me,
And we looked upon each other's face;
When I looked, and saw that there was death
I looked, and knew that he was dead, as I looked, the bright omnipresence Of morning
(2) afforded a view.
Looked o'er the immense of Heaven.

And the red tower looked grey,
but she now looked meek—
and columns risen looked vast in twilight,
But Cythna's eyes looked faint,
And the sea-eagle looked a fiend,
Very smooth he looked, yet grim;
But she looked more like Despair,
He looked, as he no doubt felt, queer,
ere the first looked brown—she died!
Though the noonday sun looked clear and bright, Looked like the wreck of some wind-wandering work . . . 349.

 But as love changes what it loveth not I give thee tears for scorn and love for hate;
 some deadly change in love . . . 402.
 thou Child of love and light . . . 423.
 Alas, that love should be a blight and snare
 That if I loved before, now love was agony.
 And marriageable maidens, who have pined With love . . . 455.
 And cast the vote of love in hope's abandoned urn.
 thoughtless pride his love in silence bound,
 Laone was the name her love had chosen,

 Where is the love, beauty and truth we seek
 I did devote to justice and to love My nature,
 The pity and the love of every tone;
 those eyes a kindling beam Of love divine
 But from its beams deep love my spirit drank,
 With love that scorned return, sought to unbind for fearless l. and the pure law Of mid equality the multitude Surrounding them, with words of human love,
 The watch of love is kept;
 the love that lies Hovering within those spirit-soothing eyes—
 ye feel the truth of love's benignant laws, those whom love did not his watch to keep a nation Made free by love;
 Those angels of love's heaven, that over all

- When n. makes a weird sound of its own stillness, Such magic as compels the charmed night and woven hymns Of night and day,
Her dark locks floating in the breath of night, night Involved and swallowed up the vision;
At night the passion came,
Through n. and day, tempest, and calm, and cloud,
Beneath the cold glare of the desolate night,
Night followed, clad with stars.
ere the floods Of night close over it.
And the night's noontide clearness,
Whose nightless speed divides this sullen night:
scarce did stir The stagnant night;
which night and time have quenched for ever,
But when night comes, a chaos dread
Decent, that loves the night and fears the day;
Until diminished by the reign of night.
And at night they sleep In the rocking deep Night, with all they stars look down,
— return for me When night falls,
Until the night shall conquer it.
This night my father gives a sumptuous feast,
In one n. didst thou perform, By ways inscrutable,
All in the self-same hour of the same night.
Good night, farewell!
Even as he did after the feast last night.
Whom in one night merciful God cut off
That Beatrice disturbed the feast last night?
And wherefore should I wish for night,
A deed which shall confound both n. and day?
Let her then wish for night,
After that unpoised feast the other night
Lone consumed from a night of sleepless care.
What you in one night wander
I must be gone; good night;
beware this n. That thou cross not my footsteps.
That day and night, and heaven and earth,
for this night If the Pope's resolution Cloving in night and dreams,
After such torments as she bore last night,
ere night, Think we shall be in Paradise.
Like morning from the shadow of the night,
The night to day, and London to a place
the torches Inflamm the night to the eastward, Or day unchanged by night;
tormented night and day by fever.
One fires the morning, and one lulls the night;
— And all the night 'tis my pillow white.
Night's ghosts and dreams have now departed;
Now 'tis the breath of summer night,
O sleep, nurling of gloomy night,
Outwaching weary night,
When evening yields to night,
The night was fair, innumerable stars Studded Athwart the night with trains of hickering fire, Morning on night, and night on morning rise,
and "darkened" with the night;
- Altho' they "eat from night" to morn.
lured me towards sweet Death; as N. by Day,
as the Moon may hide the night
Govern my sphere of being, night and day!
while Night And Day, and Storm,
And, day and night, aloof, and the slow, silent night Is measured moonlight of the expired night asleep.
A veil for our occlusion, close as Night's,
Night, with all thine eyes look down!
Day and night, and night and day,
Restless they plan from night to morn:
With deep and dreadful night;
With strange contortions through the night,
A cloud thickens the night.
Darkening the night, and outspeeding the wind
Into the Broken upon May-day night,
As the sunrise to which came Upon the breeze of night, encroaches On the limits of wintry night;
and bid you look upon the night.
Good night? ah! no; the hour is ill.
Then it will be good night.
How can I call the lone night good,
The night is good; because, my love,
became, my love, They never say good night.
Sweet as a summer night without a breath.
O miserable dawn, after a night More glorious
If night is mute, yet the returning sun
We met night three hours to the west of Patmos,
And with night, tempest—
Was roused last night by the alarm of battle,
Cast on the mirror of the night.
Stalk through the night in the horizon's glimmer, and hang like night On Heaven above me.
But the night is not born;
Hesperus flies from awakening night,
where the lovers lay In the deep night, might Devise in the lone season of dun night.
Till the black night divine,
All night he worked in the serene moonshine—and where have you abode All the long night, Stolen they were last night at set of sun,

- Silent as night, in night;
comrade of the night!
then, still as gloomy night,
Pass and repass for ever, day and night,
Where wealth in the mute night is multiplied
A joy by night or day, going far astray Through the dan night.
In the first sweet sleep of night,
Outwatched with me the envious night—
Pass o'er night in multitudes.
When the night is left behind
More boundless than the depth of night,
The words you spoke last night
As came on you last night—
Or read in gondolas by day or night,
And subtle talk would cheer the winter night
Out of the day and night A joy has taken flight;
then black despair, The shadow of a starless n.
Darkness more dread than night was poured upon the ground.
at night, methought, in dream
The waves, the fountains, and the hush of n.— One summer night, in commune with the hope and night or day, In vision or in dream, day and night, we two were ne'er Parted, over my sister's slumber That night, I know not;
evening, then night descended, the smoke of roofs involved in flame Rested like night,
That starry night, with its clear silence,
The scene of day and night,
until aloft The stars of night grew pallid,
As night and day, those ruthless bands around,
Doth it not thro' the paths of night unknown,
and make the wide night not forlorn.
At night when I reposed, fair dreams did pass a night Of human thought was cradled in that confusion, then despair Descends like night—
the devotion Of millions in one n. created there, the mists of night intertwining Their dim wool, restrain From seeking her that night.
O Spirit vast and deep as Night and Heaven!
Bear witness Night, and knew That coming night
ere night the array Of fresh troops and the wind that flows Thro' night.
Thro' the desert night we sped,
the two who stood beneath that night,
The night grew damp and dim,
That night and still another day limbs with the night wind were chill, or celebrate a bridal night
That willing stood—the tempest and the night, ere morning could unbind Night's latest veil, fed upon the wrecks of night and storm that night All torture, fear, or horror
At night two slaves he to her chamber sent,
I knew the day and night fast fleeing,
Ere night, methought, her waning eyes from that night She fled;
It seemed that in the dreary night,
For day, nor night, nor change of seasons
The night before we sailed, came to my bed beneath this very night, Their thoughts flow on its thousand echoes cast Into the night,
That night we anchored in a woody bay, thus night past over Upon the night's devouring darkness shed: night's gloom Meanwhile had fallen on earth ere night was gone, He broke our link'd rest?
such was now the token Of waning night.
Each night, that mighty steed bore me abroad,
With smoke, by day, and fire by night,
we fear The spirit of the night, round the City All night, the lean hyenas its beams might pierce the night, Err night the pyre was piled,
Night came, a starless and a moonless gloom.
The deeds which night and fear brought forth,
And on that night,
And, one by one, that night,
Sleepless a second night?
All night has aged Senate mate, swift as morn, when night must fade;
to you this night Laon will I betray.
Above the towers like night;
thro' forests, deep like night, we glode,
The sphered lamps of day and night,
Hovered in the purple night,
And tyrants and slaves are like shadows of night I the n. by, IV. 5.
as night when day Descends upon the orient ray, Queen of silver night?
'Tis night—what faint and distant scream
And spurn'd the lessening realms of earthly night. M. N. Rosalind, 30.
And here we may live an endless night,
A long, long night of bliss.
That poured its low moan on the stillness of n. M. N. Spec. Hora. 11.
at night Came licking with blue tongues when the black storm hurries round at night,
Which sped that winged shape through night and day,—

And the shadows of the night,
As stars from Night's loose hair are shaken, fresh May blooms That starred that night,
at intervals shadow the star-studded night.
Yet soon Night closes round,
Lightning that mocks the night,
Whilst eyes that change are night,
As a far taper fades with fading night,
And mighty suns beyond the night,
dying year, to which this closing night,
That burn in the night by the curtained bed,
Night and day, hum! hum! ha!
The desire . . . Of the night for the morrow,
But, as Syrinx fed Pan, so night flies day,
A thief, who cometh in the night,
At night he oft would start . . .
By that night's Carlisle mail . . .
Yet that same night he died . . .
Clung upon Peter, night and day . . .
Like a thousand dawns on a single night,
Stars of all night—her harmonies and forms,
A living spark of Night,
And yet to me welcome as day and night,
So thy worn form pursues me night and day,
Years, ages, night and day;
or in the moony night
Else we are shapeless as our mother Night,
Where the night has its grave and the morning its birth,
The space within my plumes more black than n.
Gleaned in the night.
one who watches thee The cold dark night,
and the azure night Grew radiant with the glory
And tremulous as they, in the deep night
I listened through the n. when sound was none.
odour-breathing sleep Of faint night flowers,
That climbs and wanders thro' steep night,
Ascends to flow like meteors thro' the night,
and through the purple night
Blackening the night!
and their speed makes night kinder,
On the brink of the night and the morning
And long blue meteors cleansing the dull night,
To check its flight ere the cave of night.
Death, Chaos, and Night,
Leading the Day and outspeeding the Night,
By ebbing night into her western cave,
I spin beneath my pyramid of night,
horne the summer night, Through isles and from the sky is showered like night, Gleam like pale meteors through a watery night,
To forgive wrongs darker than death or night;
The night was fair,
How beautiful this night!
Dost thou not cry, ere night's long rack is o'er,
The eternal orls that beautify the night,
At night o'er their foaming crest,
Many a day and night?
Many a weary night and day
And the starry night;
Swifter far than happy night,
As the night when sleep is fled,
The owl night resumes his reign
We are quite merry now. Good night.
Day and night, day and night,
When it scatters through an April night,
But our church shall be the starry night,
and thro' the night The charioteers of Arctos
"Was dead of the n," when I sat in my dwelling;
Grew dark the night;
Along the stillness of the night,
And closed them beneath the kisses of night.
Cradled within the embrace of night.
Like the lamps of the air when night walks forth,
Mocking the spoil of the secret night.
At night they were darkness no star could meek.
Night's dreams and terrors,
Through the night to frighten it,
As, when night is bare,
Gather among the stars the clouds of night.
And mingling with the still night and mute sky death is mild And terrorless as this serene n.
That night the youth and lady mingled lay
Which one vexed ghost inhabits, night and day,
The breath of night like death did flow
That shook in the wind of night.
The night did shed on thy dear head
Which the meteor beam of a starless night
There were sweet dreams in the night
over the western wave, Spirit of Night!
I ask of thee, beloved Night—
the stars that gem The cone of night, before me fled the night;
When on the smalt limits of the night
Follow it thou even to the night,
Treads out the lamps of night,
Making the night a dream;
A Shadow tracks thy flight of fire—N. is coming! Two Spirits, 4.
Night is coming!
If I would cross the shade of night,
And make night day.
